As a biker: there is cold and then there is cold on a motorcycle. I ride all year round but it ain't for everyone for sure.

How do you protect from frostbite doing something like that?

Layers.....some go the heated gear route. I've not tried it but at 47 years old my tolerance for cold is getting worse. Especially since living in the south. (Originally from the people's republic of Md.)

I ride year round in weather down to 35F (can't risk ice at 32F). I use a plug in heated vest, with heated gloves. When it's below 40F I put those feet warmers in my boots. Nothin like a toasty winter ride.

You'd be surprised how long you can go with a few layers on before you're in frostbite territory depending on how cold it is. From my experience it's usually your fingers that go first and you need those to shift and brake so if you can keep your fingers from freezing up too bad you can ride for a while.

I never did much highway riding in winter and when I did ride it wasn't for very long before I was cold enough to be done. My first year riding I rode all winter long unless there was snow on the ground or icy conditions. I don't really do that anymore. One year of riding in the cold was enough for me man 😂

I spend 8-10 hours a day on a snowmobile. Different gear than the bike, though, I could wear sled stuff on the bike. In bike gear with heated grips, I've done mid 40's for a few hours. The wind hits you differently on a bike than a sled and I doubt I could get my leg over the bike while wearing bibs. I don't know. I did have a thought about trailering bikes down and staying about 90 minutes away. It seems (discovered trying to plan a sled trip) we're going to get a warm up the first week of the year.

I don't know why you took "regular old people" as "old people", as its a phrase that isn't emphasizing "old"

But I mean yeah.

I'm not gonna predict anything but I have a feeling they won't be there. As it's freezing to ride motorcycles in D.C at that time.

They will be there in the big trucks tho!!!

I messaged just to let em know that we're rooting for em to be there. I'm sure they will be but it's nice to know we're thinking about and appreciating them and their service to Patriotism.

I'm way down in South Louisiana where it's cold at 55° 😊

I think some people should wear those masks that sit really high and also wear nondescript clothing. You know, just in case there's a situation where masks that cover up a lot of your face and wearing nondescript clothing could be in your best interests.
